HARRY PARKES AT SHANGHAL.

The N. C. Daily News gives the following nocount of this event. The steamer Kowshing arrived in Shanghar in the morning of the 13th April, bringing with her the remains of the late Bir Harry Parkes; and extensive preparations were made by the residents of Shanghai to pay their last token of honour and respect to the deceased Minister while consigning his body to the temporary resting-place in which it will repose until it is removed for its final interment in England. The Kowsking left Tientsing on Friday night, the 10th inst., a strong body of men from Li Chung-t'ang's Forces being drawn up along the Bund as a last sign of the respect which the Minister was held by the nation among whom he had made his career; and large numbers of the foreign residents also gathered to watch the departure of the steamer bearing away his remains. The body, embalmed in coffin of Chinese manufacture, and covered with the deceased Minister's flag, lay upon the deck, enclosed in a kind of tent formed of awning while upon the coffin lay the State sword and official can of the deceased, surrounded by immortelles. Shortly before the hour at which the body was to be removed to the Mortuary Chapel in Shan-tung Road, where it will rest as long as it remains in Shanghai, the coffin was lowered from the steamer, placed on and taken to the Kee-cheong Road, between Hunt's Wharf and the Old Dock, where is remained guarded by four sailors from the Nautilus, with bayonets fixed, until the funeral procession was formed. ARRIVAL OF THE BODY OF SIR right to say that nowhere previously in China have I ever met with officials so enlightened and so well-disposed towards foreign trade as the Vicorcy and the Customs Taotai at this port, and I feel quite cortain that were the officials at the other treaty port actuated by the same friendly disposition, the relation-between China and the Great Powers would become much more ordial than they are at present, to the benefit of both parties. I thank you much for your sympathetic remarks respecting my contemplated retirement. It is a melangholy matter to close one's career and retire from the battle-ground of life, but suffering as I do from the combined effects of age and ills, I plainly feel that my working life is terminated. With the return of peace I sincerely trust that you will meet with prolonged season of reasonable prosperity. Mr. Davenport leaves to night for Shanghai on his way to Europe, and we trust that his health will be restored, and that he will return to official life. THE TERRITORIAL SYSTEM. We have received from a valued military correspondent a story which we should hesitate to guaranteed. A little time ago, a young man, of good physique, applied to a recruiting officer at the head-quarters of his district to be received into her Majesty's service. Having passed the medical examination, he asked to be at once appointed to his own county regiment, in the ranks of which he had many friends. The answer was, that he might at once join any one out of six named corps, but not his own county regiment until a special application had been made to the Horse Guards. This would, of course, involve considerable delay, and in the mean time, the applicant, who had spent his last shilling for his railway fare to the district head-quarters, would have to support himself as best he could. Nor oven after waiting and starving for several days was it certain that he would gain his object, i being optional with the authorities to refuse the special permission. Our correspondent affirms that this is not by any means an isolated instance of the compulsion exercised on recruits to make them join regiments whose ranks need strengthening, in lieu of those with which they have a territorial connection. If this be the case, the much lauded system of establishing close relations between regiments and specia localities is plainly a sham, extending very little further than the cumbrous regimental designstions which have been substituted for the old 'Up to this point the statistics are doubtless cornumbers.—Globe.

The surprising statement is made that Vassar College is being slowly but surely laughed to death through the medium of humorous parasubject of jest with every cheap wit, and tho consequence is that now Vassar has only half as many students as it had ten years ago. It seems that jokes have the power to kill even when as inane and stupid as those made about Vassar Collegegirls. The following, from the Troy Times, is one of the jokes -it may even be considered something more than a joke:-The financial troubles at Vassar College have been the subject of much surprise and regret.
